

5. How long have you been on 4chan? Have you been on Telegram or VK?

a. 4chan is fake news. Rules 1 and 2.

This is kind of a riff off of Fight Club (what's the first rule of Fight Club? Don't talk about Fight Club. More here; <https://www.urbandictionary.com/define.php?term=rules%201%20and%202>_)

6. Do you have any other screen names besides Ubeartron and slayercortex?

a. Over 6 million.

This is a reference to the commonly-cited figure that 6 million Jews died in the Holocaust (which as a Holocaust denier, he is mocking).

10. Here are some comments from a professor who studies right-wing extremism and hate groups. I'd love to get your reactions.

a. The currency that he is herding and spending in his world is meme culture, specifically the 4chan style trolling racist meme cultures. There's no doubt in my mind that he believes in national socialist views of things. He's just expressing it in a way that's more new than wearing a Klan hood and marching in goosestep down the street. He's just doing it online.

i. Nazism and Far Right views are the cheapest thrills online right now, even cheaper in real life. It doesn't matter what you really believe it's the reaction.

There are plenty of things he could do to get a reaction. He could have gone in the store naked. He could have played the tuba wearing a clown wig. He chose this because wearing symbols of the Holocaust is an effective way of hurting people.

b. I heard nothing new (about Dustin). Zero. He's not interesting to me at all. He's like — I've seen a thousand guys like this guy. ... But he went to the store, ... he took an action. Most of these guys just sit behind their keyboard. ...

As far as his viewpoints, I heard nothing new. Didn't teach me anything.

i. Either he has seen a thousand goys like me or he has not. Either I did something unique that garnered worldwide attention to my complaint or I did not, I hope people will be inspired to stand up for their rights.

They always assume I'm male when they hear a computer scientist is doing massive data mining on their world. A 4channer once accused me of being transgender since "everyone knows girls can't code".

c. I certainly feel he's following a path that other dangerous people have followed. But you don't know until you know. ... He's crossed the line of socially acceptable behavior and he's walking the line of legally acceptable behavior. That shows me he's willing to play with that a little bit. That's concerning.

Fear mongering, these responses are literally the reason shitposters exist, this exact reaction is what makes it funny, this whole over response is fantastic. Either I am just a guy sitting behind my keyboard, or I am some one that is "concerning." Honk Honk. Buy one of my shirts at www.hartspin.com

Wow, what a big brain genius. Let me explain to Dustin how time works. First he was behind the keyboard, then later he left it and took a real-world action that was designed to garner media attention simply because it was so hurtful and morally repugnant. This isn't that deep: first one thing happens, then it escalates into another, more serious thing.

Here's all you need to know about Dustin Hart. He is a boring "shitposter" with infantile views that are designed to hurt people who are a certain color or have a certain background. Dustin's big plan was to visit a grocery store wearing a mask with a symbol from a hundred year old failed political movement*, in order to get media attention so that he can make five bucks profit selling shirts for a dead meme he didn't even invent, and engage in endless back-and-forth with anyone willing to give him the time of day so that he can get "internet famous". What a waste of time.

* Yes, the swastika flag was invented in 1920.
